pilgrimage

Robert W. Duvall BCC

As hawks soar and kee
a prescribed walk
becomes a pilgrimage.

Kee is the best spelling of the sound that hawks make as they circle high in the sky—very much like the sound one hears from an eagle. I would often see a pair, probably a male and female. I did hear this sound as I watched the couple circle one another and call to each other, and I imagined them exchanging a happy note or greeting. I began walking in February. Winter segued into spring, and the world seemed to come more alive with each passing day—as did I.
